Dashboard

Menu options for a large screen

When working with a large screen (over 1600 pixels) the default setting will be that the main menu on the left is open all the time. If you think that the menu is taking up too much place, you can change the setting under Your Account in the right hand tab. Pull the slider button to the left and the menu will collapse when you are not working with it.

Save Journals as drafts

You now have the possibility to save new journals as Drafts. This will make your life easier if you are working with a large journal and are, for some reason, interrupted before you are quite ready to post it. When saving a journal as a draft you can return to where you left off and continue working without having to worry about losing your work or having made a mistake in your journal.

When you click Save a notification will inform you that the journal is saved as a draft. You will now find your journal in a separate draft list when you choose Draft in the Journal Type filter.

Copy Journals

The possibility to copy journals is a great time saving feature if you post similar entries. In Briox, you now have the possibility to copy all the journals that are created manually (the series the journal belongs to must be marked for manual entry under Settings - Accounting - Journal Types). When you copy a journal, all its information is copied except linked documents and the date which instead becomes today's date.
